This guide will help you consider what you need and where to buy your bulk order of cardboard boxes, whether you're an individual or a business. Decide on Size and Shape Cardboard boxes are available in a wide range of sizes and shapes, from small squares to massive rectangles large enough to hold refrigerators. Some cardboard box suppliers may offer more than 1,500 size options, so it's best to have an idea of what you'll need before you start shopping. Have a range of suitable measurements in mind before you shop and look for boxes that come as close as possible to matching those dimensions. It may not be possible to place a bulk order for mixed box sizes and shapes. Instead, you might need to buy bulk quantities of boxes in a single size and shape. Decide on Material Cardboard comes in a variety of different formats. You can find standard corrugated boxes or heavy-duty cardboard meant to hold weighty materials. Some suppliers sell weatherproof cardboard, which may be useful if you plan to ship materials that cannot get wet. Others sell cardboard boxes designed specifically to insulate contents or to ship hazardous materials. Decide on Quantity In the context of cardboard boxes, "bulk" might mean different things to different people. An individual getting ready to move into a house might want a cheap cardboard box source for a few dozen boxes while a manufacturer or retail shipper might need to find a supplier for thousands of boxes. So, make sure the quantity you have in mind matches up with what the seller offers. Keep in mind that you'll need to have room to store the boxes you order. You might want to find out what the estimated size of the shipment you'll receive so you can ensure you have space in your warehouse or if they're being shipped to your home, garage or basement. Decide on Special Features Depending on what you need the boxes for, it might be helpful to look for options with special features. These may include self-seal strips on flaps or white exteriors for better presentation. You can also find multiple-depth boxes that can be folded to become smaller as needed. Comparison Shop There are several different places to buy cardboard boxes in bulk, with plenty of online options and potentially even some local businesses you can deal with. Be sure to comparison shop between different companies so you can find the best rate for your purchase. Don't forget to factor in things like shipping costs. MORE FROM QUESTIONSANSWERED.NET Wondering about whether a collector is registered as a charitable organization in Washington state? Most collectors will have this information on their website, but you can always search the Washington Secretary of State's website external link to find out. Some King County Recycling & Transfer Stations also accept all clothes, shoes, and linens. Don't put it in the curbside bin Clothes, shoes, and linens do NOT go into local curbside recycling carts. These items can jam up machinery in recycling facilities. The exceptions to this are Bellevue, Bothell, Burien, Carnation, Issaquah, Maple Valley, and SeaTac (external links) which have special programs that take clothing at curbside, following specific guidelines - if you live in one of these cities, please make sure to consult their website for recycling guidelines. Get a collection bin Apartment complexes and other properties can play an important role by providing sites for the collection of clothes, shoes, and linens. For rental property owners, building managers and other housing professionals, having collection bins at a property is a great way to provide a service to tenants and support sustainability. Across Long Island, there are many convenient clothing donation bin locations, so you may drop off your donation at the one nearest to you. To arrange for a FREE home pickup, call (631) 234-0000 or CLICK HERE to schedule a pickup online! Most donations are tax deductible and receipts are provided. Because the uses are so varied they come in a variety of different sizes. Most financial institutions offer them for rent or as a perk to their customers. Sizes and How to Get a Safe Deposit Box If you let someone at your financial institution, bank or credit union, know that you're interested in securing a safe deposit box they'll put you in touch with the personnel that can explain the system to you including the available sizes, cost and how to set up a contract for a box. Sizes vary from place to place, but most carry smaller boxes such as 3"x5" or 5"x5". Most are 18" to 24" in length. Larger boxes are usually available as well and come as large as 10" x 10". What Size Safe Deposit Box Do You Need? Decide what you would like to put in your safe deposit box. If you have valuable jewelry that you would like to keep safe or an inventory of your belongings for insurance purposes, a box is a great place to keep these items safe from fire, water damage or theft. What Not to Put in a Safe Deposit Box Once you decide what you would like to put in the box, you can decide what size you would like to rent. This will prevent you from overpaying for a larger box than you need. Valuable jewelry and important paperwork can all go in there. For all of the things that you could - and should - put in a safe deposit box there are some things that don't belong there. Original copies of your will, your health directive and an article granting your power of attorney to another person should be kept somewhere other than your safe deposit box. If something happens to you, not just anyone in your family can get into the box. You can consider adding a co-signer for your box, but nobody else in your family will be able to access your belongings. Passports, deeds and titles are also good things to put in a box for safe keeping. Other Things to Consider for Your Safe Deposit Box When you get the safe deposit box, you can list a co-signer so someone else is able to access the box if something should happen to you. Check with your homeowner's insurance to see if the contents of your box are covered if you want to put jewelry or other valuable belongings in it. When You Can Access Your Box One thing to keep in mind when renting a safe deposit box is that you'll only be able to access your box during business hours. For this reason it's important to not store belongings in the box that you may need to access when your bank or financial institution is closed. MORE FROM ASKMONEY.COM
